1) "COMPETITIVE SUCCESS FOR TRIBAL YOUTH: CAREER IN CIVIL SERVICES"

The importance of educational development of Tribal's was recognized decades ago. After independence and on the adoption of the constitution, safeguards were built into the administrative system through special provisions incorporated in the constitution. In response to the special obligation, Govt. of India has provision for reservation of seats for tribal youths in educational institutions with a provision of 5% relaxation in minimum qualifying marks for admission. At present 7.5% are allowed for tribal students in admission to all levels of education.

In addition to above safeguards, central and state govt. have initiated a number of other measures like establishment of hostels for tribal boys & girls, Ashram schools in TSP area, awarding of Various types of scholarships, coaching and allied schemes, book bank for tribal students studying in Medical & Enggi. Colleges, free supply of book stationery, uniform etc, reimbursement of tuition fees, mid day meals, institutions as modern trades & training centers for self-employment etc.

On the backdrop of above mentioned facts reservation for the tribal's in employment has always been one of the avenue for their upliftment and integration with the other prominent communities in India & globe Despite the facts tribal youth do not secure their seats on the government vacancies due to the various reasons. Prominent among them is non-competitive efforts and lack of required inputs or training to compete the career oriented world. Considering the above mentioned facts Dr. B. A. Deshmukh has organised one day orientation seminar on career in civil services for Tribal youth. The very objective of orientation seminar was to orient tribal youth about civil services career. Around 350 youths were participated in the seminar on the scheduled date i.e. 23rd September 2012.

Experts in the field of career guidance were invited to speak on the topics as under,

1. What is competitive career: Dr. C.R. Das
2. Facing the competitive career: Dr. Anjali Kurne
3. Management of competitive Examinations: Shri. Vishwanath Patil
4. Towards Goal achievement: Shri Tanaji Borhade

All the students were received well. There has been presentations and interactions, discussion among the student youth and experts. Tribal youth who are deprived and for away from the competitive career were got beneficial from the seminar. Most of them were motivated through learning by doing during the presentation made by experts in the seminar.

2)'NOTIFIED TRIBES AND DENITRIFIED TRIBES WOMEN: PRESENT SITUATION & CHALLENGES.'

Seminar on the present situation of NTDNT women and challenges before them was organized on 10th October 2012. It aims to understand the current situation of NTDNT women and their problems. Around 50 NTDNT women workers were participated in the seminar. An eminent experts, activists and social workers were invited to present their views in the seminar as under.

1. Key note address by Dr. Raosaheb Kasabe

2. Status of NT/DNT women: Smt. Pratima Paradesi.
3. NT/DNT women in society: Issues & challenges: Dr. Narayan Bhosale.
4. Govt. Role in the Development of NT/DNT: Smt. Razia Patel.
5. NT/DNT women in Literature: Shri. Mothiraj Rathod.
6. Concluding session: Dr. B.A. Deshmukh.

All the resource persons have presented their views in order to promote the deliberation and discussion. There was a common view amongst the resource persons that the women in Notified & Denotified tribes have most neglected & deprived from education and still far away from the accessibility of basic amenities. Violation of human rights in NT/NDT community more particularly among women is common phenomena. These nomadic tribes need some special Constitutional Safeguards on the lines of other weaker sections of society.

All the participants were received well and involved in discussion. Participants were more sensitive and demanding towards protection from the police atrocities. Their views on the violation of human rights of Notified and denitrified tribes and women. While concluding the seminar Shri. Motiraj Rathod and prof. Bhoumik Deshmukh were present. Dr. Deshmukh reviewed the whole day presentations and discussions and concluded that Nomadic Tribes have a very low status in the society, they do not have a easy access to education, health facilities, employment and other development avenues. Constitutional Safe guards needs to be provided for these communities.

3) "SEMINAR ON 'EDUCATIONAL ISSUES OF TRIBAL WOMAN AND EMPOWERMENT.'"

The uniform educational system both in terms of structure and content has somewhat imposed on tribals and marginalized communities. Due to the distinct cultural background of tribal communities, present educational environment rarely appeals to the tribal children, youth and particularly women. Percentage of tribal youth in higher education in India is only 0.0097, of them girls percentage is very lesser. Several studies revealed that tribal girls are more vulnerable in school and colleges as far as their environmental adjustment is concerned as outside world is new for them. They have tremendous potentials and great wiseness but outside world make them speechless and restricts from overall development.

While confronting with non-tribal environment in the metropolitan cities like Pune, tribal female students come across with different adjustment problems and situations at their learning and staying place. On the other side, they are unaware about their own potentials to be explored and developed.

In order to facilitate the adjustment process and helping to remove the inferiority complex among the tribal female students Dr. B. A. Deshmukh of the Department of Adult Continuing Education and Extension, University of Pune organize one day seminar on the topic entitled 'Educational Issues of Tribal Women and Empowerment' on Saturday, 5th January, 2013 at Sant Namdeo Auditorium. More than 250 tribal female students from various colleges in Pune city and University Departments were participated in the Seminar. Shri. Sharad Patil, renowned Social Thinker from Dhule has delivered keynote address. Other guest speaker Smt. Najubai Gavit, Tribal Novelist and Smt. Ushakiran Atram, Tribal poetess from Gondia have presented their views & thoughts.

Giving orientation to tribal female students to acquaint and adjust with the learning environment was objective of the seminar. All the guest speakers were well known in their area of work.

Shri. Sharad Patil in his speech narrated the importance of matrilineal system in tribal communities which was providing the higher status for women in society. Smt. Najubai Gavit and Ushakiran Atram gave an outline of tribal problems in general and women in particular. Tribal women in higher education is almost absence Smt. Varsha Deshpande dealt the legal issues of tribal women and loopholes in the women laws which are not applicable to the tribal society. She also stressed on the failure of Government in implementing the tribal development programmes.

Dr. B. A. Deshmukh, convener of this state level seminar in his introduction gave an detailed outline of problems faced by tribal female students in the higher education and education in general. Most of the problems of tribal female students lie in their cultural background. Age at early marriage, indifferent attitude of parents marriage, indifferent attitude of parents towards girls education, feeling of insecurity, feeling of in security, finance etc. are the problems to be urgently addressed.

4) 'SEMINAR ON, 'PEOPLE CENTERED ADVOCACY:'

Was organized by Dr. B. A. Deshmukh on 15th February 2013 for the students of Diploma in Tribal Development. Resource persons from National Institute of Advocacy studies, Pune have been invited to speak & present before the students.

People Centered Advocacy:

Ideally, a democracy reflects the concerns of people manifested through political parties and elected representatives. In a vigorous and full blooded democracy, there would be no need for separate platforms for advocacy. However we are all too blooded democracy, there would be no need for separate platforms for advocacy. However we are all too acutely aware that the marginalized have continued to become more and more marginalized and the practice of democracy in the marginalized and the practice of democracy in the subcontinent leave much to be desired. Democracy in its more functional avatar, as in India , is certainly more open to public influence, yet the influence is definitely means, or even by means of similar class interests and ideology, continuously influence policy and its implementation or lack of it. This influence is called corruption.

People centered advocacy, we believe is the real spirit of democracy, that which progressively makes democracy more substantial. It seeks to go beyond the idea of advocating on behalf of the marginalized to the practice of enabling and empowering the marginalized to speak for themselves.

People-centered advocacy seeks to challenge and change unjust power relations at all levels. It uses grassroots organizing and mobilizing techniques in order to engage marginalized people in the advocacy process. It also uses campaigning, networking, building coalitions and media advocacy that give visibility to their issues and mobilizes public opinion. It organizes people's commissions and public hearings, uses budget analysis and other such advocacy tools. And during this exercise, the marginalized people learn about the root causes of their problems and understand them in context of power and relations. The ultimate aim of people-centered advocacy is to promote social and economic justice, equitable social change, and sustainable development.

People centered advocacy is therefore essentially a value driven political process. In the course of our engagement with people's movements, we have been able to lay down three non negotiable values without which our praxis would have little meaning.

Equity: The urge for a more just world is necessarily located in belief in equity. Celebrating cultural, ethnic, and natural differences as valued and cherished diversity, but letting anyone of them become a means of enforcing socio-economic inequality is the key towards imbibing this value.

Practicing it as part of peoples movements is a challenge, but one that has been readily accepted in the paradigm of people centered advocacy. Apart from achieving its stated goals, the most important goal of people centered advocacy is self redundancy and that too as soon as possible and not in the distant long term. Practice and belief in equity, therefore, buttresses the process of capacity building of leadership within the marginalized.

Democracy: The belief in voicing of free and fearless opinion, safeguarding minority opinion and belief in the wisdom of the ordinary but many, as opposed to select few constitutes the values of democracy. Just as the belief in equity is the fountainhead of people's struggles and envisaged only when there are spaces to be seen and heard, by the many and the powerless. In case such spaces do not exist, the first function of advocacy would then be to create such spaces, in the polity, society and family. Practice of democracy, just as equity, cannot wait, it has to be part and parcel of how movements are organized and struggles conducted and that connects us to the third and the more controversial value of non-violence.

Non-violence: Advocacy by definition cannot exist without non-violence being the credo of people's movements. Advocacy is based on the premise of dialogue, and violence is the end of all dialogues. Advocacy rests in the belief that the superior logic of the good of many, of the innate values of humanity is born of conviction, and that convocation can be communicated. Advocacy of the marginalized that which continuously challenges the system will be and is met with systemic violence. In such cases, the practitioners of people Centered Advocacy do not fall back on violent means, they fall back on the second value of advocacy, as stated above, democracy, and their priority than becomes reopening of democratic spaces for dialogue.

All the student were received well and motivated to associate with the NCAS, Pune for taking further orientation.(Source: NCAS Resource Material)

VALUE:

The workshop allowed members to enhance their skills, build their research precision & contribute to develop a skilled research base for future.

ACHIEVEMENTS, LIMITATION:

The essence of the workshop requires strong commitment & individualized skills. Hence the goal of adding comprehension information was greatly achieved. However, only information will not improve the scenario. Putting them to practice & employing them on a regular basis will have to be taken up for better results.

DETAILED DESCRIPTION:

A)Bare beginning: the workshop begun with initial formalities of registration & filling up forms. Great vigor and enthusiasm were seen on everyone's faces. Dr. Navnath Tupe addressed the audience with his welcome note & details about workshop schedule. He called upon Dr. Dhananjay Lokhande (Director & HOD, Department of Adult Continuing Education & Extension) to present his welcome address. Dr. Lokhande expressed his gratitude to the guests on the chair & all the members who have come to attend the workshop & those who will present their presentation. He also thanked Honorable Vice Chancellor Dr. W.N. Gade, who despite of his busy schedule has encouraged & inspired the cause. Hence upon Dr. Gautam Bhong (Dean, Faculty of Mental, Moral Sciences, University of Pune) was called on dice to illustrate the background & give the workshop a formal start. He stressed upon the fact that research work in social science in India is witnessing a lot of repetition & replications. Thus, in-depth review of literature & hypothesis testing methods needs to be taken into considerations. He emphasized on the fact that research guides needs to be more alert about this. Hence, this workshop has been organized.

Honorable Vice Chancellor Dr. W. N. Gade addressed the audience & expressed his views. He also appreciated & encouraged the need for such workshop.

B)Moving Ahead: Our honorable guest Dr. R.S Deshpande (Dr. R.S Deshpande is currently the Director of the Institute for Social and Economic Change (ISEC), Bangalore, an all-India Institute of interdisciplinary research and training in social sciences. Apart from all these he is a poet and an artist. He was called to give his keynote address. He also led the first session. Dr. Deshpande presented a comprehensive view on research, its limitations & other related aspects. He strongly envisaged on supervisor - student relationship. In this context, he mentioned about deep attachment between supervisor & student. He brought to light the fact that we have to create a bigger family, who will pass on information from one generation to another. To stress upon this, he cited various personal examples & illustrations. With regard to the existing limitations in the research field, he mentioned plagiarism & unethical conduct. Thus, he said that research guides & students need to have a futuristic view with a moral conduct. Amongst other facts, he requested the Vice Chancellor to employ someone, to evaluate the referee's report on Ph.D files.

On this account, he also included taking a referee who can suggest something valuable that will improve the report.

Lastly, he thanked all the organisers who have invited him.

Dr. Deshpande concluded his inspiring inaugural speech with a strong message with a pinch of humour. Prof. W. N. Gade, Hon'ble Vice Chancellor, University of Pune hereafter gave his presidential address. His talk was a mix of information, message and motivation. He said he strongly supports the cause of this workshop as he expects a lot from research guides of Pune University. He elaborated on this saying that Pune University is one of the top most state universities. Thus, a lot is expected. He also announced that 4000 plagiarism detection software's have been ordered so that authentic work can be produced and no copy-paste takes places in research work. He emphasised on adopting an interdisciplinary approach in research as all social sciences are so interconnected that cannot be any water tight compartment. His talk concluded with everyone breaking for tea.

Tea was followed by keynote address by our chief guest Dr. R.S.Deshpande. He began by questioning the validity and relevance of research in social sciences. According to him, research in social sciences is tougher than research in physical sciences as social sciences do not have labs or walls or roof or boundaries. The walls of physical sciences are closet. However, rapid changes take place in social sciences. He then went on to elaborate the principles of research. He also enlarged the characteristics of the guide, the student and the topic. Out of box thinking, going out of boundaries, thinking out of book covers is something that every researcher must develop. Clarity, robustness, objectivity, simplicity and structural organisation are the basic tenants of research. He denounced that research priorities in today's context needs stopping extreme westernization, including empiricism and philosophical traits and adopting interdisciplinary approach. Finally, he talked about the pursuits of knowledge which include: A- Attributional, R-Relational and C-Classification

His talk brought us to the end of the inauguration session and was preceded by lunch after which the first post lunch session began.

The first post lunch session was headed by Dr. Kamble as speaker and Dr. Sadanand on chair. The topic was "context of research and priorities". In his view, knowledge in today's context has moved from having a moral value to knowledge itself as a value. Business has become an important aspect of knowledge. Our concern, he elaborates, is to acquire knowledge, more knowledge and better knowledge. It is up to the users to use that knowledge for progress and development. But today knowledge has acquired another aspect i.e. , critical reasoning as compared to perspective reasoning. He clearly stated that we are functioning in a environment where hierarchies prevail in the domain of the society. The idea that knowledge which is claimed by those upper strata of the society is credible and the idea of taking sides hampers objectivity of research work was also put forth by him. His main concern here was that this continuing trend in knowledge has made it an instrument of continuous critique. Knowledge has become a political engagement.

Dr. Kamble in his in-depth version gave us a sociological perspective of research priorities and perspectives. His talk was not only different but was eye opening also.

Preceded by his session was the second post lunch session titled "Approaches of Social Research" by Dr. Gurudas Das. He gave us the basics of research process. Right from defining what is research to its characteristics and principles. It was a rather enlightening session as in the process of trying to understand complexities we often forget our basics. Unless we know our basics clearly, it would be difficult to take steps toward more critical aspects

The last session for the day i.e., the third session was taken by Dr. Chandrakant Puri. It was titled "research priorities of social exclusion and inclusive policy". His talk concentrated basically on developing research strategies to resolve unresolved issues from the grass root level. He said all policy making institutions focus on higher things but the grass root level reality is different. The main bullets from talk are

- Theory and practice has to come together
 - Research which does not have practical aspect to it does not have much strength according to him
 - Focus in research must be aspects that make the country grow
 - Evolving an anti-oppressive research paradigm for excluded groups and communities.
 - Action-advocacy research must be undertaken
- His presentation was greatly appreciated and applauded. Audience thought it was highly sticking to the agenda.

The last session of the workshop was the open session, in which Mrs. Rohinisahani have the open discussion with all the audience.

Final Section

In the final section of the workshop the vote of thanks to all is given by Dr. Navnath Tupe, Assistant Professor & Coordinator of this workshop.

11. NATIONAL SEMINAR ON TRIBAL ISSUES AND STRATEGIES FOR EMPOWERMENT 22nd - 23rd NOVEMBER 2012

Introduction

The tribes of India constitute 8.2 per cent of the total population and present a kaleidoscopic picture. They belong to 645 groups, each group vastly different from the other from ethnic and cultural stand points. In fact it is this mosaic like canvass of the tribal population that contributes greatly to the country's diversity. Distributed all over the country the tribes practise a variety of economic activities ranging from gathering forest produce to hunting and gathering and shifting cultivation to manufacturing and selling handicrafts. Despite their practice of divergent economic activities the tribal economy can be described as subsistence economy and their role in the modern industrial activity is found to be minimal. Though the age old stereo types that the tribes always wish to confine themselves to self-created enclosures, they resist development and they are easily susceptible to evil influences, no more hold good there is no denying the fact that the indigenous people are the last to enjoy the benefits of development. The post - colonial discourse on the tribal situation had thrown up several conflicting perspectives about the tribes. The Nehruvian perspective heavily influenced by Elwin's seminal work emphasized on making the processes of preservation of the pristine cultural traits of the tribes as well as their integration with the mainstream society complementary. In other words, the futility of over-administration of the tribes was acknowledged and their development was sought to be mainstreamed into the nation-building project with caution. Some believe that the tribes are to be given a space without any governmental or civil society intervention, while the right wing ideology refuses to recognize them as sons of the soil and brands them as 'Vanvasis' instead of 'Adivasis'-a more appropriate and scientific nomenclature-in an attempt to compress them into the dominant Brahminical or Hindu category. These strands apart there is a broad consensus on certain issues related to indigenous groups that they are an exploited lot, their disempowerment levels are high and more than any other category of the population they went through and are going through the most excruciating experience called 'displacement'.

In spite of affirmative action policies the literacy levels of the tribes are very low. Same is the case with their health status and other areas of development. Only a few tribal groups have been able to enjoy the benefits of positive discrimination. A majority still reels under poverty and is wedded to an out dated way of life. In addition to these disadvantages the single most threat that looms large over them is corrosion of their resource base-to be more specific, loss of land. The colonial rule facilitated the entry of a character called 'money lender'-till then unheard of- into the tribal hinterlands thus paving way for a new kind of exploitation of the tribes while the establishment during the post- independence era in its over-drive to wet larger tracts of land and generate electricity stripped the Adivasis of their most valuable possession 'land'. Both the dispensations denied them their entitlement not to speak of empowering them. In some parts of the country members of some tribes are joining forces that are fighting against the state while in some places they are being used to further the communal agenda. Despite the debilitating factors mentioned above the desire to keep their cultural identity intact is very strong among the tribes and history bears clear testimony to it. Globalization has helped the economy to revitalize itself but did little good to the tribals in terms of enabling them to participate in the economy. They hardly get an opportunity to contribute to the sectors that have expanded phenomenally due to economic reforms owing to their low skills, lack of adequate training and lack of confidence accumulated over centuries due to geographic and social exclusion. The establishment of power plants, construction of mega irrigation projects, acquisition of lands -all ostensibly in the name of boosting the economy- have adversely impacted their ownership of their resource base. The government in the coming decades will have to relinquish its role as the sole provider as a result of which the hardships of the indigenous people are likely to intensify.

The tribal, the original citizen without exercising or even realizing his citizenship, is now passing through a critical phase of history. The need to explore alternatives for the tribal to realize her or his best self is strongly felt than ever. In this backdrop a two day national seminar will be organized by the Dept. of Adult, Continuing Education and Extension at University of Pune from 22 to 23rd November, 2012. The seminar shall deliberate upon the problems of the tribal communities and seek to contribute meaningfully to the discourse on tribes.

Aim

The aim of the two-day National Seminar is to discuss issues concerning the Scheduled Tribes in India and explore alternatives for their empowerment. It shall also endeavour to critique the existing models of tribal development and make suggestions to the formulation of liberal and more inclusive policies for their development.

Objectives

1. To analyse the problems of the tribes in the context of globalization.

2. To discuss the challenges relating to preserving their cultural identity.
3. To assess the efficacy of the programmes and schemes meant for empowering them.
4. To understand the patterns of their political participation.
5. To review the different perspectives about the indigenous people in India.

Themes of the Seminar as per the Broucher

1. Education among Tribes - Problems, Policies and Perspectives.
2. Culture, Language, Art and Lifestyle of tribes
3. Changes in the role of institutions like Family, marriage and Inheritance.
4. Livelihood Issues - Displacement, Relocation and Rehabilitation of project affected tribes.
5. Traditional Medicine and Healing practices among tribes

12) OBSERVANCE OF THE INTERNATIONAL LITERACY DAY IN COLLABORATION WITH TRAILOKYA BUDDHA MAHASANGHA SAHAYAKA GANA, PUNE (BAHUJAN HITAY PUNE PROJECT)

International Literacy Day was observed by the Department of Adult, Continuing Education and Extension, University of Pune every year on 8th September to emphasize the significance of literacy, and raise public awareness of the need to promote literate individuals, communities and societies.

In observance of this day, universities across the country engaged in activities that encourage sensitizations, awareness and functionality programmes relating to literacy and its developmental aspects.

On 17th September, 2013 department observed the international literacy day in collaboration with BahujanHitay Pune Project, an NGO at Daodi slum of Pune.

The function was graced by Director and Head of the Department, Prof. Dhananjay Lokhande and Dr. Geeta Shinde, Assistant Professor of Department of Education and Extension, University of Pune as Chief Guest and Guest Speaker of the Programme respectively. Mrs. Malati Wankhade, Mrs. Vishakha Trisoon, Mrs. Sushila Kadalakwere also present on the occasion as members of the Programme. Dr. P. V. Gupta, who is the coordinator of this programmes

Speaking on this occasion, Dr. Geetha Shinde stated that though the literacy rate of Maharashtra was very low earlier, it has risen today and as such the number of educated persons in the State has increased. However, the number of students getting enrolled in government schools is still very low as the government employees of the State including the government school teachers are reluctant to send their children to government schools.

Delivering the Presidential speech, Prof. Lokhande, stated that with advancement in Science and Technology, one should not only be educated but also be computer literate. To be a well-educated person depends on hard work labour one invests. Today, a number of differently abled persons are well educated. This is because of their hard work, he observed.

Mrs. Malati Wankhade, Director, Bahujan Hitay Pune Project (NGO), told that the purpose of their being a part of promoting International Literacy Day coincides with this year's theme; "Promoting Literacy for an Empowerment of Slums of Dapodi", and they believe that the only way forward is for our slum dwellers to not only be literate, but properly educated, because they need to know how to read to further their education. "It's all about promoting reading," she said.

The participants also had the privilege of seeing one short story that was shown by NGO. The film story, entitled "In the Name of God" directed by Mr. Pawar, who is assistant professor of the communication department, from this film participants learned that how the Kolhati community girls exploited by the upper castes communities.

International Literacy Day has been recognized in Dapodi for the past three years under the auspices of the department.

1. Shanghai International Conference on Social Science 2012 at Shanghai, China.

Shanghai International Conference on Social Science was organized by Higher Education Forum between 14-17th August 2012 at Shanghai, China.

Dr. Deshmukh have been invited to present his paper and chair the session in conducted conference. Since lifelong learning, his present area of work was one of the emerging Disciplines of study and practice to be developed by the Institutions of higher education in India and abroad, He developed the paper to be presented in the conference entitled, Lifelong Learning as a Discipline: Possibilities, Prospects and Challenges (An Indian Perspective).

As per the programme schedule he presented his paper on 15th August 2012 between 8.45 to 10.15 a.m. in very first session of the conference which had also been chaired by him. It was wonderful session since four of other presenters had also presented their papers on the same line by giving interdisciplinary scientific treatment to their topics.

Main content of his presentation was conceptual background of lifelong learning, some key terms in lifelong learning, Basic elements of Lifelong , evolutionary Perspectives, Importance and Role of lifelong learning in India, Current Scenario of Lifelong learning in India, Approaches to Lifelong learning, modes of Lifelong learning and challenges facing the lifelong learning etc.

Lastly he invited some questions, additions on all the presentations and tried to highlight the strengths of each of the paper and concluded with giving his thanks and appealed to make collaborative contribution in research in Lifelong learning. In response to work collaboratively. It was indeed a interactive and thought giving session.

Total in all 500 academicians, researchers & Social Science Practitioners were participated in Four days Conference belonging to different disciplines in Social Science and Education faculty from all over the world. The conference was mainly divided into two types of exercises and discourses i. e. paper presentations and poster presentations. Asian, Arab and American participants were seen to be more in number whereas eight participants were from India and we two were from Maharashtra.
